	Comment. The former German airfield near Rerik is located in the southwestern section of the Wustrow Peninsula. According to reports in 1949 and 1950, part of the airfield was destroyed and the other part was under cultivation. All of the hangars, quartering buildings and other installations had been demolished or torn down prior to May 1949. Duelling houses on the edge of the field were allegedly occupied by civilians. The field is believed to cover an area of about 800 m 1,000 meters. It can probably be enlarged only to the southwest where the ground is believed to be marshy. Extensive work including the construction of a runway, possibly consisting of runway much, would be necessary in order to make the field
